New Method Predicts Gradient Fracture

by Mario Zamora, M-I Drilling Fluids Co., Houston, Tex.

| (b)(4) copyright |  |
|------------------|--|
|                  |  |
|                  |  |
|                  |  |
|                  |  |
|                  |  |
|                  |  |
|                  |  |
|                  |  |
|                  |  |
|                  |  |
|                  |  |
|                  |  |
|                  |  |
|                  |  |
|                  |  |
|                  |  |
|                  |  |
|                  |  |
|                  |  |
|                  |  |
|                  |  |
|                  |  |
|                  |  |
|                  |  |
|                  |  |
|                  |  |
|                  |  |
|                  |  |
|                  |  |
|                  |  |
|                  |  |
|                  |  |
|                  |  |
|                  |  |
|                  |  |
|                  |  |
|                  |  |
|                  |  |
|                  |  |

(b)(4) copyright (b)(4) copyright About the Author

Mario Zamora is manager of engineering research and development for M-I Drilling Fluids. His responsibilities include computer applications, drilling engineering research, and equipment development. A 1967 mechanical engineering graduate of the University of Texas, Zamora is a registered professional engineer and an active member of several industry organizations.